In the last few years there has been marked activity on the part of real-estate and colonization companies, as well as of railways and some industrial organizations, in advertising the resources of this region and particularly in promoting the sale of the cut-over pine lands. The majority of the immigrants who purchase land for general farming have had little or no experience with such soils as commonly occur in this part of the Gulf Coast country. In too many instances the choice of location is largely determined by considerations other than the character of the soil or its adaptability to the kind of farming to be pursued. While accessibility to markets, the local facilities for transportation, and communication, as well as the general social conditions of a locality should be given due consideration, the soil itself is of first importance in the selection of land for a farm home. This paper discusses only the general soil characteristics, and but little more than mentions the chief problems in southern agriculture. It gives briefly such information as should be at the command of anyone contemplating the purchase of farm land. The territory to which reference is made embraces the southern third of Mississippi and the adjoining portion of Louisiana to the south; that part of Alabama below the Black Belt ; the southern counties of Georgia, and the northern ones of Florida. The peninsular portion of the latter State...
